

Educational System: Changing approach with the Competitive World

In today's competitive world, education has crucial role to play as it drives the pace of growth and development. Education drives one's journey, career and life. Its not important whether you graduated from high ranked University or some College, it's the skills that you acquire or the passion that drives you to become someone rather than anyone.

But has the today's educational system strong enough to make the students self sufficient in this competitive world. I doubt that!. Is education all about subjects being taught or its beyond that? Will that be enough to make to stand firm in future? All these questions are linked to educational system.

So lets talk about the Educational system in this new era.

Earlier educational system was all driven though subjects being taught, activities forced to follow and having think the way the things being taught. No cross questions asked or different approach allowed. This unintentionally makes the student a machine that being programmed to do as were said. But the revolution came 8-10 years ago when people can to know things beyond the bookish knowledge and that can't be achieved though particular way of thinking. It takes every other approach rather than the actual one to understand the possibilities of non-occurring of an event. And that's when old system was being replaced with the Creative approach. Now things being taught aren't bookish but more practical and that's how it should be. Because things learned practically lays more impact than learned though theoretically. Students now are allowed to explore the way they want. Internet has boosted the growth and curiosity apparently. With the introduction of smart classrooms, teaching though animation become popular which bring interest in students to learn concepts. Various Olympiads gives that space to student strong in any particular subject to showcase knowledge nation wide.

But is that sufficient to on self in this world? No further comes the knowledge that one gains when experience world through their own eyes. It maybe wrong interpretation but gives one idea how the world operates beyond academic Subjects. Visiting to guy groceries with parents, there bargaining and choosing the quality product isn't been taught in books. It comes by usage.

Another thing that is important is that scoring or grading should not be the only way of judging skills and passion. Because the ones who think different score differently. They may have less interests in some subject but have lot potential in interest. Everyone has their way of acquiring skills which may not suite academic curriculam.

Also students today need to be taught about Sex Education. It has now become more important than few other subjects because of the growing crimes against women. Rather than student on their own surf for some related topic and may got themselves indulged in some taboo topic. That's where Sex education come sot play. It not only ensures self safety by educating girls with whats wrong or right but also gives them them surety that's its not their fault eventually and stands firm in saying that to the culprit and society. Also it brings about with it, the new mindset for women.

So finally it important to keep changing with the current scenario rather than being on with the old mindset whether it be for a person or about a system, because changing and exploring is the current trend.
